

Conflict and engaging in difficult conversations about race are often challenging. Join us for a two-part experiential learning series where you will examine race, power, white privilege, and institutional racism to deepen your understanding and practices around coaching and adaptive leadership for racial equity.

Participants will explore tools, resources and practices to identify their core equity dilemma, to facilitate and deepen racial equity conversations, and to build adult capacity to strengthen educational outcomes of historically under-served students. This series is guided by an essential question: What coaching/leadership moves are critical to implement to disrupt and dismantle inequitable practices, policies and procedures so all students achieve?

Target Audience: Principals, District Leaders, Teacher Leaders, school teams
